

Dear Member of Parliament,

I'm a Canadian who is very concerned about food prices and the global supply chain for food. As a consumer, my food costs are already rising sky-high. I have learned that Canadian farmers have to pay carbon tax on all the inputs they use to grow our food. I also know the federal government is considering a mandated reduction in fertilizer.

Please reconsider this. We cannot afford policies that will make our food even more expensive, or hard to get.

Please leave Canadian farmers alone to do the good work they do, and grow the good food Canadians rely on.

Thank you for reading.
